Located in the Gulf of Thailand, just 12 km south of the Cambodian coast, Phu Quoc is Vietnam's largest island. The district of Phu Quoc includes the island itself and 21 smaller islets with a total area of 574 square kilometres and a permanent population of approximately 85,000. Phu Quoc is famous for its two traditional products; fish sauce and black pepper. The rich fishing grounds offshore provides the anchovy catch from which the prized 'nuoc mam' (fish sauce) is made. Pepper cultivation is located inland and more recently a pearl farm was established, producing black, pink, yellow and the more traditional white pearl.

THINGS TO DO

SNORKLING & FISHING

Visit one of the 25 islands and islets off the southern tip of Phu Quoc by chartered boat. It's a fantastic area for sightseeing, fishing, swimming and snorkeling. Diving and snorkeling in the warm shallow waters of Phu Quoc takes place on the Northern-Western side of the island or around the small archipelago to the South. The diverse mangroves, beaches, hidden coves and uninhabited islands are all parts of the beauty of Phu Quoc island.

LONG BEACH

The aptly named Long Beach stretches from Duong Dong southward along the west coast. There should be no problem for beachcombers to stretch out their towels on the sand and take in some sun. Long Beach is easily accessible from Duong Dong on foot, but a motorbike or bicycle is necessary to reach some of the remote stretches towards the southern end of the island. There are several small lanes from the main street Tran Hung Dao, where Hong Bin Bungalow is located, leading down to Long Beach which shelters some of the nicest places to stay and eat.

DINH-CAU-NIGHT MARKET

Dinh Cau Night Market is made up of over 100 stalls stretching almost 500 meters along Vo Thi Sau Street. The market serves a delicious range of some of Vietnam's best seafood cooked on coal fires right next to your table. The market is open daily from 5 pm until midnight and sells a range of food and beverages, jewellery, handicraft and souvenirs.

PHU QUOC NATIONAL PARK

Declared a Unesco Biosphere Reserve in 2010, the park is the last large stand forest in the south of Vietnam. Phu Quoc National Park contains many forest types and landscapes including mangroves and wetlands, sparse forested areas, coastal vegetation and forests on rocky mountains. A total of 208 animal species were recorded in the National Park, as well as 1,164 higher plant species. Walking trails are limited but there is a good walking trail 5kms before Ganh Dau which is relatively easy and a great way to escape the heat and take in the surrounding environment. Hire your own motorbike to explore the northern parts of the island or book a tour through one of the many operators on the island.

PEARLS

For black, yellow, white, pink or any other colour of pearl, Phu Quoc Pearls – on an isolated stretch of Long Beach – is a requisite stop. Watch a live oyster being prised open to reveal one of the best known pearls in Vietnam.

SAO, DAM & VONG BEACHES

Sao and Dam are two beautiful white-sand beaches, just a few kilometres from An Thoi, the main shipping port at the southern tip of the island. There are a couple of beachfront restaurants at Sao Beach, where you can settle into a deckchair or partake in water sports. North of here is Vong Beach, where the fast boats from the mainland dock. It's also home to Mui Duong Watersports, which offers jetskiing, waterskiing and other aquatic fun.
